FOR YOUTH DEVELOPMENT®
FOR HEALTHY LIVING
FOR SOCIAL RESPONSIBILITY

New President and CEO

In January 2010, Richard H. Malone became the President and Chief Executive Officer of the YMCA of Metropolitan Chicago. Mr. Malone was formerly Senior Vice President at Tribune Company's Interactive Group, and served in the nonprofit sector through his association with Have Dreams, a not-for-profit organization with a mission to improve the ability of children with autism to learn, function independently, socialize, and realize their full potential. "The Y represents an enormous opportunity to make a difference -- to change people's lives for the better," says Malone. "I can't imagine any more meaningful and compelling work."

Safe Kids

Responding to pressures on school funding coupled with tensions in the city surrounding summertime violence, the Y of Metro Chicago initiated a summer camp program and associated fund raising initiative, the Safe Kids Campaign. This project made it possible for 800 at-risk youth ages 5-12 to attend summer day camp in 2010. In addition to providing a safe place where children can grow and have fun without fear, the Y's summer day camps provide nutritional support, academic enrichment, character development, and community discovery for youth in some of Chicago's neediest neighborhoods.

Merger with Heritage Group YMCA

The integration of the former Heritage Group YMCA into the YMCA of Metro Chicago enabled us to scale our resources, purchasing power, programming and member privileges farther into southwest Chicagoland, including Naperville, Aurora and the Oswego region. All the Y's remain open and intact, serving more than 6,000 families and retaining their current names: Kroehler Family YMCA, Fry Family YMCA, Oswego Family YMCA, Y Sports Complex and the YMCA Safe 'n' Sound child care program.

Re-Connecting with our Cause

In October 2010 the Board of Managers approved a new strategic plan and set of 12 guiding principles that will focus the Y's work for the next three to five years. Our priorities include realigning our programs to serve children, while also supporting their families and communities. We will work harder than ever to make all of our YMCA Centers a "third place" where everyone can feel welcome, where children and families can develop the skills and relationships they need to be healthy, confident, connected and secure. To support this goal, a capital investment of $11m (potentially $33m over three years) will be made to address critical capital needs in Ys across the Association.

Additional Learning Opportunities

In 2010 the Y was asked by the Chicago Public Schools to partner on Additional Learning Opportunities (ALO), a unique experiment aimed at extending learning time for students. The problem to be solved is that CPS students have significantly less learning time in school than their peers in other large urban districts, like the Houston Public Schools, so that they receive the equivalent of four years less schooling by the time they graduate. The Additional Learning Opportunities (ALO) program accelerates student achievement by providing an additional 90 minutes of math and reading through online instruction, and provides students with support tailored to their individual needs. The Y was the leading partner, staffing 8 of 15 ALO schools to provide students with over seven hours of additional instruction time every week.

Improved Revenue over 2009

Our financial performance improved substantially in 2010. Actual total program operating revenue in 2010 exceeded that of 2009 by $1 million. An operating surplus of $2.5 million offset depreciation of facilities and much-needed capital improvements.

Increased Volunteer Engagement

Throughout its history, the Y has demonstrated its ability to bring communities together for the common good. One way that we do this is through volunteer services. Volunteers help with cleanup and painting in our low-income residences, distribute healthy food to needy families, and serve as adult role models in youth sports and child care programs. In 2010 the Y hosted 108 corporate groups who completed 228 volunteer service projects (+34% over 2009) and benefitted from the services of 3,987 individual volunteers (+43%).

Our Commitment to Inclusion

At a time when real family income is decreasing, and a record 500,000+ people are jobless in our metro area, the Y gave away unprecedented levels of financial assistance in 2010. Membership and program scholarship support in the amount of $3.5 million helped families who are most in need to join or continue to participate in Y programs.

Camp Independence serves Children and Teens with Spina Bifida

YMCA Camp Independence celebrated its first full year of programming for campers with spina bifida and neurological disabilities. Going away to camp can be a transformative experience for youth of all backgrounds, but it has not always been an option for children with special needs. In addition to Camp Independence, the Y of Metro Chicago's Camp Duncan hosts specialty medical camps for children and teens with diabetes, asthma, autism, spina bifida or Tourette's syndrome; who are burn survivors, victims of sexual abuse, or who stutter or have speech disabilities; who suffer from the loss of a loved one; or who are part of a family split apart in the Foster Care system, all have the opportunity to meet up with campers who share their challenges. A new partnership for Camp Duncan is with Thresholds Psychiatric Rehabilitation Centers and provides a camping experience for adults with mental illnesses.

New Senior-level Positions

Managing an organization of our size requires a dedicated and professional team to oversee its many moving parts. With a new President and a new strategic plan have come new senior management hires in technology, legal affairs, development and finance.

More First Anniversaries

Kelly Hall YMCA, which opened in January 2009, has established itself as an important and much-needed resource — some would say an oasis — in West Humboldt Park, one of Chicago's poorest and most violent neighborhoods. In partnership with the Archdiocese of Chicago and the Greater Chicago Food Depository, Kelly Hall now serves nearly 700 youth, offering youth development programs, day camp, a food pantry and Kids Café, a community room, youth sports, family nights, a technology center, computer classes, parenting and health education classes, a fitness center, senior activities, a teen lounge, and distribution of donated goods. The Jeanne Kenney YMCA Day Care center also had its first anniversary in March of 2010.

Things'll Get Better

Nineteen years old, Ladon Turner is turning his life around with the help of mentor Art Dunn. Ladon is now a member of the Y community. Art works with some of Chicago's roughest and most endangered kids and has also been a Y volunteer for the last 15 years. He has helped Ladon get a new outlook.

Ladon:

I met Art when I was at school. There were nine of us in a class, and everybody was talking with Art, but I was just sitting there. He asked me something, but I was trying to dodge him, to give him the runaround. I said some things to him so he wouldn't like me; trying to make him mad. But what he said to me was "Things'll get better with time."

I was ditching school one day and he called me. Then I started hanging out with him and I've been doing that ever since. He's become my mentor--somebody who's there for you and who you can talk to when things are going wrong; somebody who will help you out when you need some help.

I was doing badly in school, and fighting every now and then when my friends needed my help, but Art stayed with me. When he told me "Things'll get better," he was talking about things I didn't know about, things I never did before. I opened myself up for the change. So I brought my grades up, and I've been going to school, and I'm not ditching classes anymore.

Things have gotten better

Things have gotten better for me. I would say to other kids, things can get better for you too, but you've got to want things to get better. You've got to be ready for the change. You've got to be ready to change yourself on the inside before anything gets better. You've got to be tired of doing the same thing.

I got involved with the Y when Art asked if I would like to do a college tour. That was my first experience with the Y. I saw colleges for the first time, and it made me realize I could go to one. That's one of my goals now.

Getting out of the city

Recently I went to Camp Pinewood in Michigan with the BLA (Black and Latino Achievers Program). I love seeing the stars at Camp Pinewood. You can't see stars in the city. There's something about camping that I enjoy. You don't hear noise in the country. There are no cars, there's nobody arguing, no gunshots. You can think about stuff, think about what you're going to do with yourself. It's quiet; it's just you and your thoughts.

Gang life

I was in a gang at the time I met Art. I still see the guys, they're my brothers, but they understand that I don't do the things that I used to do any more.

I would say that, of all of them, about five would get out if they had the chance. But each of them needs two things: the right person to help, and a need for change that's got to come from inside them. Art was there to help me change and it was the inside of me that accepted that change.

Change is hard

Some people say it's too late for them to change. If you do something for so long, you get used to what you're doing. But I still think they have the potential to change. They just have to be ready for it. Change is hard, and it gets harder. But when I hear the other guys were fighting the other day, I think, "I'm glad I was with Art. I'm glad I was busy."

If I hadn't been with you, I would have been with them.

Mentoring and volunteering

Art:

I got Ladon involved in BLA — the Y's Black and Latino Achievers program. BLA is a great program, and I've been volunteering with them for over ten years. It was a great thing for Ladon because BLA is flexible enough to work with students who are struggling academically.

BLA helped get them involved. They allowed my boys — who are cut from a completely different cloth — to come along on the college tour and get a great experience out of it. Ladon is seriously thinking about going to college as a result. The other two boys that I took on the tour are already enrolled in college. Without the exposure they got through BLA, I don't think any of them would have imagined they could enroll in a junior college, let alone a four-year college.

Moving beyond the block

Opening the kids up, that's what this is about. People who live on Ladon's block literally cannot walk one block over because of gangs. It's horrible to be physically constrained just to one block, and the school three blocks away, and the local gas station. That's it. That's all that they can do. That's their only safe zone of movement. So to open the kids up and say you can go much further than the limits of the block, it's important.

Although Ladon now sees the possibilities and the potential that he can go off to college, he still has a lot of work to do. The possibilities and the potential enable him to hunker down and become more serious about the work that has to be done. So we try to keep him busy.

Three kids from Ladon's program with Youth Advocate Programs died in the last two weeks. Ladon grew up with one of them, who was killed just yesterday. Ladon looked at me and said, "If I hadn't been with you, I would have been with them." That's lifechanging time. ▼

Art Dunn works for Youth Advocate Programs, Inc., and volunteers with both the South Side Help Center and the Y. South Side Help Center — southsidehelp.org Youth Advocate Programs, Inc. — yapinc.org

The Black & Latino Achievers Program (BLA) is one of the YMCA of Metropolitan Chicago's youth development programs that encourages interaction between youth and adult role models and the exploration of higher education and career options. Founded in 1971 at the Harlem New York Branch YMCA, this nationwide program fosters the academic, personal and career development of African-American and Latino youth enrolled in the 7th – 12th grades.

Financial Outcomes

A solid sense of financial stewardship

The Y of Metro Chicago significantly expanded last year, adding several new centers and tens of thousands of new members and program participants.

This expansion was possible because of our focus on resource allocation. Although our mission revolves around personal and social responsibility, we carry it out with a firm and all-pervasive sense of financial responsibility.

We recognize that capital is capacity. The higher our respect for and stewardship of the resources we manage, the greater our ability to change lives in positive and lasting ways. We owe supporting foundations, companies and institutions, as well as individual donors and members, nothing less than our constant financial vigilance.
